Read 1,000 Books Before Kindergarten

Help your child build early literacy skills and a lifelong love of reading with Clearwater Public Library System's free 1,000 Books Before Kindergarten program. Families with children from birth through preschool can track books in Beanstack, celebrate milestones and earn rewards along the way. Every book counts, including storytime books and family favorites read again and again.

MyClearwater.com/1000Books.

Find Your Next Hobby at the Library

Learning something new does not have to begin with an expensive class or a long list of supplies. At Clearwater libraries, residents can explore new interests, practice their skills and connect with others in a welcoming environment.

The Maker Studios at the Main Library provide space for hands-on learning in woodworking, sewing, drawing, laser engraving, 3D printing and other creative pursuits. Programs and open studio sessions give beginners a place to ask questions and experiment while allowing experienced makers to continue developing their work. The studios are free and open to the public.

Learning also takes place throughout the library system. The Library Program Guide includes opportunities such as crochet, weaving, jewelry making, watercolor painting, gardening, guitar, chess, games and more. These programs offer more than instruction. They create a relaxed setting where neighbors can exchange ideas, solve problems and learn from one another.

Patrons can continue exploring at home with books, digital resources and items from the library's Thingamabrary. The collection includes art kits, board games, ukulele kits, tools, telescopes and technology kits. Language-learning resources, cooking publications and other online materials also help library cardholders build skills at their own pace.

Trying a new hobby can lead to a creative outlet, a useful skill or an unexpected passion. Whether the goal is to make something by hand, learn a game or simply try something different, the library offers a practical place to begin.
